

Rob Henry and Sarah Singleton are Civil War reenactors who are swept back to 1861 through the medium of Civil War photography. They arrive in Washington, D.C. just after the battle of Manassas, when people in the capital are reeling from the shock of Confederate victory. During that time of anxiety and suspicion, Rob and Sarah are arrested as enemy spies. Joined by Rob's younger brother who attempts to rescue them, the three must sort out whom to trust--and whom not to trust--in the topsy-turvy world of Civil War espionage.
