

Dom Anscar Vonier was among Englands greatest homilists and theological writers in the early twentieth century. In The New and Eternal Covenant, he offers a sustained reflection on the eternal nature of the New Covenant as the family heritage of the Church of God and as the root of the sacramental life. The Covenant, Vonier writes, is an alliance between God and man; it is a peace concluded between divine Justice and the sinner; it is a friendship between the Creator and His creature; and if man were not thus united with his Maker there would be no true Covenant. Between God and man there is a bond, and without that bond the Testament would not exist.
